Things did settle down, as Lang had known they would. They entered their second week alone in virtually the same position they had started: no romantic entanglements firmly established. But they knew each other a lot better, were relaxed in the close company of each other, and were supported by a new framework of interlocking. I felt my throat burning and my stomach turning over, but I watched in petrified fascination. Then they were on a ship, and all the boards were grey from having gone so long without paint. The grey man took Amos into his cabin and they sat down on opposite sides of a table. "believable" was the key word. He had to be involved unless the laws of probability had broken down completely. Yet I could swear Detweiler wasn't putting on an act. His guileless innocence was real, damn it, real. "rendezvous with a drone capsule full of supplies we hadn't counted on." And besides, Lang thought to. "When I blew the wizard here a year ago," said the North Wind from above them, "he left it right there, but the snow and ice have frozen over it." "It was a very . . . short argument." Her voice began to catch. "And I find the . . . conclusion rather . . . inconsistent" Her control was cracking. Tears spilled out of her eyes. Her hand was white on the handle of the tool caddy. It had been decided that only in knowing their environment would they stand a chance. Humaner, THEODORE STURGEON. "Well, down in that valley there's a layer of permafrost about twenty meters down." "January." She groaned the word. "That's forever. Kiss me good-by, Gordy." She lowered her eyes.
