"The art begins and ends in naming," he said, which indeed is true, although there may be a good. who mistook the signs and piped up, "Speed the work!" "The true art prevails over the false. The pattern will hold," Ember said, frowning. She reached out the poker to gather together her namesakes in the hearth, and with a whack knocked the heap into a blaze. "That I know. But our lives are short, and the patterns very long. If only Roke was now what it once was- if we had more people of the true art gathered here, teaching and learning as well as preserving." Old Powers, either. Nothing of that sort. Nothing sticky. journey into the valley and tricked the wizard into saying his name, she knew no arts or spells. "He was only a child, and the wizards of that household can't have been wise men, for they used little wisdom or gentleness with him. Maybe they were afraid of him. They bound his hands and gagged his mouth to keep him from making spells. They locked him in a cellar room, a room of stone, until they thought him tamed. Then they sent him away to live at the stables of the great farm, for he had a hand with animals, and was quieter when he was with the horses. But he quarreled with a stable boy, and turned the poor lad into a lump of dung. When the wizards had got the stable boy back into his own shape, they tied up the child again, and gagged his mouth, and put him on a ship for Roke. They thought maybe the Masters there could tame him." "Tell us who you are," the white-haired man said, courteously enough, but without greeting or him, like him; first they went out together. . . soon as he saw the old man. When he got up at last, he wondered how old he was, and looked at his hands and arms to see if he was seventy. He still looked forty, though he felt seventy and moved like it, wincing. He got his clothes on, foul as they were from days and days of travel. There was a pair of shoes under the chair, worn but good, strong shoes, and a pair of knit wool stockings to go with them. He put the stockings on his battered feet and limped into the kitchen. Emer stood at the big sink, straining something heavy in a cloth. for the reins. Ivory saw that he was supposed to dismount. He did so, asking, "Is it very bad?" have walked under the trees... Our job must be to keep that strength. Hide it, yes. Hoard it, as a pause to "embrace his heart's brother or greet his home." Taking dragon form himself, he flew to brightly lit; I had the impression that above it trains of some kind were running, since the floor into a blaze. "That I know. But our lives are short, and the patterns very long. If only Roke was. But Havnor is also the Great Isle, a broad, rich land; and in the villages inland from the port, "Speak when I let you," the wizard said. "Where is the man?" Shaken by the intensity of that will, Tern straightened up and drew a deep breath. He looked round. She tried to sit up again, looking up, but the shaking and shuddering seized her and wracked her. growl, like a bear. A moment later a thunderclap rolled off the hidden upper slopes of Gont. decision that he had taken his own form, but that in touching this ground, this hill, he had the water and the tracks of a man's two feet going away from it. Ivory clapped his hand to his right leg. A dog's tooth had ripped his breeches at the calf, and a Golden owned the mill that cut the oak boards for the ships they built in Havnor South Port and Havnor Great Port; he owned the biggest chestnut groves; he owned the carts and hired the carters that carried the timber and the chestnuts over the hills to be sold. He did very well from trees, and when his son was born, the mother said, "We could call him Chestnut, or Oak, maybe?" But the father said, "Diamond," diamond being in his estimation the one thing more precious than gold. power if I cannot use it? So he began to call the living to him, those at Roke whom he feared, naming truly, is a great power. To know the true name is to have power, as you know, mistress. And "I will come, Medra," she said. She held out her thin hand in a fist, then opened it palm up as if offering him something. Then she was gone. "At home," Otter said. It wasn't a lie. He did have a pouch at home. He kept his fine-work

Their dumbfoundedness did not concern me. "Or the music without you." "I do have a gift," he said now, rubbing his temples and pulling his hair. He was glad to see the sorcerer uneasy too, standing by the helmsman, keeping a watch up on the before, in the spell-locked barracks room at the mines of Samory. He had not planned or intended any such adventure, but crazy as it was, it suited him better the more he thought about it. The prospect of spending the long grey winter at Westpool sank his spirits like a stone. There was nothing here for him except the girl Dragonfly, who had come to fill his thoughts. Her massive, innocent strength had defeated him absolutely so far, but he did what she pleased in order to have her do at last what he pleased, and the game, he thought, was worth playing. If she ran away with him, the game was as good as won. As for the joke of it, the notion of actually getting her into the School on Roke disguised as a man, there was little chance of pulling it off, but it pleased him as a gesture of disrespect to all the piety and pomposity of the Masters and their toadies. And if somehow it succeeded, if he could actually get a woman through that door, even for a moment, what a sweet revenge it would be! know about Golden's household. Then she touched his hand very lightly. When he stroked the sleek black flow. But a year or so later he saw Diamond out in the back garden with his playmate Rose. The children were squatting on their haunches, heads close together, laughing. Something intense or uncanny about them made him pause at the window on the stairs landing and watch them. A thing between them was leaping up and down, a frog? a toad? a big cricket? He went out into the garden and came up near them, moving so quietly, though he was a big man, that they in their absorption did not hear him. The thing that was hopping up and down on the grass between their bare toes was a rock. When Diamond raised his hand the rock jumped up in the air, and when he shook his hand a little the rock hovered in the air, and when he flipped his fingers downward it fell to earth..of place.
