guide as among the compromises has already become ready. Crow ranted, but at the mere thought that the Book of Names might still exist he was ready to set. Hound came in on her heels. "Well," he said, "in the first place, when I got to the city, I go up. woman, I did not immediately grasp, for it reached me when my back was turned, as I was." "Got you," the old man said, looking down at the muddy, lax body. He added, "Too late," regretfully. He stooped to see if he could pick him up or drag him, and felt the faint warmth of life. "You're tough," he said. "Here, wake up. Come on. Otter, wake up." "brother, go wash out that cut, and change your shirt. You stink of the pothouse." And she went of a lighted ship far out at sea, in darkness, in the rain. "You mean they'll oblige a wizard? But you aren't a wizard." He knew now, from Elehal and others on Roke, what that wall was. It lay between the living and the dead. And in that vision, Anieb had walked on this side of it, not on the side that went down into the dark. or hints of a greater mastery. As one true element controlled all substances, one true knowledge that lived long, long before Erreth-Akbe, before Morred, before there were people in Earthsea. It was hard to be aware of her through the wizard's talk and the constant, half-conscious controlling spells that wove a darkness round him. But when Otter could do so, then it was not so much as if she was with him, as that she was him, or that he was her. He saw through her eyes. Her voice spoke in his mind, stronger and clearer than Gelluk's voice and spells. Through her eyes and mind he could see, and think. And he began to see that the wizard, completely certain of possessing him body and soul, was careless of the spells that bound Otter to his will. A bond is a connection. He-or Anieb within him-could follow the links of Gelluk's spells back into Gelluk's own mind. streamlined table strutting on comically bowed legs; it moved forward, glasses of sparkling. "That's right, little servant, well done," Gelluk said to her in his tender voice. "Give your dross to the fire and it will be transformed into the living silver, the light of the moon. Is it not a wonderful thing," he went on, drawing Otter away and back down the spiral stair, "how from what is most base comes what is most noble? That is a great principle of the art! From the vile Red Mother is born the Allking. From the spittle of a dying slave is made the silver Seed of Power." III. Tern. Reluctant, he stepped forward, barefoot and bare-legged; he had rolled up his cloak into his pack an hour ago when the sun came out. Reeds brushed his legs. The mud was soft and sucking under his feet, full of tangling reed-roots. He made no noise as he moved slowly out into the pool, and the circles of ripples from his movement were slight and small. It was shallow for a long way. Then his cautious foot felt no bottom, and he paused. this, because I did not know how to get out of the park. It was now completely empty.
